WHAT THE KITCHEN IS TO THE PROGRESSIVE HOUSEWIFE.

Many women have a wrong idea of what a kitchen should be. They often seem to think of it as a kind of room where everything should be hidden away and tucked away from sight. This may result in "appearance," but it is not efficiency. A kitchen is the workshop for the preparing of food, and efficiency and convenient placing should rule over mere looks.

The efficient kitchen should be so arranged that it is not necessary to hide all pots and pans under doors and in cupboards away from sight. Did you ever visit a factory or large establishment where the boilers and the caldrons and the belting and the thousand tools were stuck away from sight when not in use? Your kitchen equipment should be so attractive and good that it looks well and doesn't need to be tucked away.

Every time a pot is pushed into a shut closet we increase the dangers of uncleanness, and it takes us twenty unnecessary motions to stoop to place it in a low cupboard and fish it out again. Hang up, place on shelves, put knives in strips of canvas, screw eyes on small pieces; use no closet doors if possible and let your kitchen be a real workshop.

CHEERFULNESS.

Cheerfulness is a habit. You can get into the habit of being nasty and biting at people, or into the habit of smiling and making everybody smile with you. There are plenty of causes for happiness if we look for them. But do we look? Do we not too often look for the dark and nasty things?

Here is a story I found the other day: A gentleman from the city was passing a beautiful little country cottage, at the door of which sat an old lady knitting. Everything was so quiet and peaceful that the man from the city felt the very peace of God about the place. "You must see a good deal of happiness here," he said to the old lady. She was partially deaf, and looked up a moment dubiously before she answered: "No, I haven't seen him so far as I know. I'm not much acquainted round here anyway, and my eyes are so poor that I wouldn't know him if I saw him coming in the gate." The gentleman smiled. He had his answer. Some people have such bad eyes that they do not know happiness when it enters the gate. This was not what the old lady meant, but it was the lesson the gentleman saw in her words; and the lesson is true. Try every day; try, indeed, all the time, to see something beautiful.

WINDFALL APPLES MAY BE CANNED AND USED FOR PIE FILLING, APPLE SAUCE, ETC.

Windfall apples, which are often left on the ground to rot, may be made to serve a useful purpose by the economical housewife. A little forethought and labor at this time of the year spent on a despised product of the orchard may supply the winter table with many an appetizing and wholesome dish which otherwise would either be lacking or supplied at a higher cost.

Windfall apples may be canned whole and used as a breakfast dish, for dessert, salads, or baked. There will be many which are too much marred for canning whole. In this case, the marred places may be removed and the apples sliced and canned for either pie filling or for apple sauce. Following are the recipes for thus taking care of windfall apples:

Whole Windfall Apples Canned.
Select firm, not overripe apples. A great difference in the canned products will be noted in the different varieties of apples. This recipe is intended for firm and preferably tart varieties. Some varieties will require less time and some more.

Remove blemishes, cut out core. Blanch for 2 minutes in boiling water; plunge in cold water. Pack in tin cans or glass jars and add just a little very thin sirup. Put on rubber and top and partially tighten. (Cap and tip cans.) Sterilize 20 minutes in hot water bath, 15 minutes in water seal, 10 minutes in steam-pressure outfit, or 6 minutes in pressure cooker. Remove jars, tighten covers, and invert to cool.

Apples canned in this way make a product that is generally wasted available for apple salads, dumplings, breakfast apple dishes, apple potpies, and baked apples.

Windfall Apples for Pie Filling.
Peel and core; slice; scald 2 minutes in boiling water; plunge in cold water; pack in glass or tin, and add about a teaspoonful of hot, thin sirup to each quart; put on rubber and top, partially tighten (cap and tip cans); sterilize 10 minutes in hot-water bath, 12 minutes in water seal outfit, 10 minutes under 5 pounds of steam, or 4 minutes in pressure cooker; remove jars, tighten cover, invert to cool. This is a good method of utilizing the good portions of partially decayed apples.

Note:—The thin sirup made in these recipes is made as follows. One and one-half cups of sugar to 1 cup of water, brought to boiling.

THE DEVELOP MAINE MOVEMENT.

Geo. L. Sanborn of Norway, recently elected Register of Deeds for the Western District has also been appointed county supervisor in charge of the affairs of the Develop Maine Movement in Oxford County. Mr. Sanborn took up this additional work after a thorough investigation of the Movement and now proposes to conduct a vigorous campaign to interest the people of the County in this effort to bring new industries, new capital and additional farmers into Maine.

Mr. Sanborn is particularly fitted for this work as he is young, alert, industrious and stands well throughout the whole county. His education was obtained in Norway, where he attended the high school, from which he was graduated in the class of 1904. He then entered the shoe factory as an operative and worked as a cutter and in the office. Later he worked in Auburn and in Portland. About a year ago he became financially interested in the Victoria Chemical Works and is doing well.

The Develop Maine Movement is becoming affiliated with just such bright young men in all parts of the State, and is perfecting an organization which will eventually be the most effective of its kind in the county. In every case the prospective candidate for the position of county supervisor has been investigated thoroughly before he has been offered the position. The candidate has then been given an opportunity to satisfy himself of the merit of the Movement.

Oxford County contains as much or more mineral wealth, more farm opportunities, better timber, more water powers, better manufacturing sites than any other county in Maine. It can offer the prospective farm buyer, manufacturer or investor, more than any other territory of equal size on earth. If the people of the county will join forces to make these facts known to the people of the world, Oxford county will experience a business boom that will make the West turn green with envy.

Mr. Sanborn will appoint men and women to endeavor to secure additional members at once. He is authorized to pay them liberal commission and will, himself, be pleased to receive applications. The membership fee is only $1 and every man and woman in Oxford county should join.

NEW FIELDS.

"I told him there was a dozen of people right here in town who had never heard of him."

"I guess it didn't. He started right out to find them and borrow money."

PURE BLOOD MAKES HEALTHY PEOPLE

Hood's Sarsaparilla surely and effectively removes scrofula, boils and other blood diseases because it drives out of the blood all the humors that cause these diseases. They cannot be successfully treated in any other way. Internal applications for their removal have proven almost useless, because they cannot drive out the impurities that are in the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure rich blood, perfects the digestion and builds up the whole system. The skin becomes smooth, clean and healthy. This great blood remedy has stood the test of forty years. Insist on having Hood's for nothing else acts like it. There is no real substitute. Get it today. Sold by all druggists.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrh of the Eustachian Tube that cannot be cured by local applications, provided the patient will send for circulars, free.

CAMPFIRE AT SO. PARIS.

Last Wednesday, there were six persons who responded to the invitation given by W. R. Kimball Post and Ladies of the G. A. R. of So. Paris, namely: A. S. Chapman, Geo. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Bartlett. We were met at the station by a delegation of Veterans, who greeted us with great cordiality, and escorted us (with the beat of the drum) to the new Grange Hall, where again we were most heartily welcomed by the Ladies' Circle and our own Relief Corps Sisters, from the adjoining towns. There was a large number from Mechanic Falls, Oxford, Norway and North Waterford. Hebron was also represented. It was estimated that there were nearly two hundred present.

The forenoon passed swiftly in greetings and fraternal fellowship between the veterans, and we thought as we looked in their faces, how much they enjoyed these gatherings in meeting their comrades and talking over the stirring times of '61 to '65. They served a beautiful dinner consisting of everything one could wish for, cold meats, beans, puddings and pies of every description, and cakes galore. At 2 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Mr. Franklin Maxim with the following program. The address of welcome by Mrs. Renaud breathed a fraternal spirit that went to the hearts of the boys of '61, and was received with much appreciation by all. Then, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Smiley Reading, Albert Morris Read, "What did the private do?"

Then the time was given to the Veterans and many interesting speeches were made by them, and as "time and tide wait for no man" all too soon we had to leave to catch our train. As the years roll by the memories of the civil war grows more dim and distant, its heroes are fast passing to the great beyond, but the object for which they fought will always be preserved, and may we always work together for their good, irrespective of color, but shoulder to shoulder, and heart to heart, doing what we can for the Grand Army of the Republic.

has two purposes—accomplishment and inspiration. It is natural to turn to God in prayer. To those who felt their prayers unanswered when their requests were not granted, he said there is always more than one answer. God's answer may be "No," if He thinks best for us not to have what we want. Dr. Merrill gave as a definition of prayer, "Coming to God, saying we will do our best, and leaving the rest to Him." In his lecture on the "Authority of the Bible," Dr. Merrill said that "we are debtors to generations before us for our religion. Christ did not wait for an ideal Church but invested his spiritual experience in the Church as it was. The Church gives no inspiration which we should carry outside for the greatest thing is personal work. What a river does so does the Church. It rests, refreshes, comforts and bears up the heavy-laden."

"The auditorium meetings in the evening were generally conducted by college girls or one of the class leaders. One evening the foreign delegation spoke to us. A Japanese girl gave a talk in her own language and was afterwards interpreted. The representatives from Greece, Turkey, South Africa, Brazil, Bulgaria, Korea, Japan and China spoke to us of the need of missionaries in their countries."

"Besides the study there was plenty of opportunity for recreation. The girls played basket ball, base ball and tennis and many took long trips or went boating. Each evening after supper one of the colleges would give a 'stunt,' and then the various delegations, the smaller ones uniting, would sit on the grass and give their songs and cheers. Some evenings when it was too hot for the auditorium meetings we sat under the trees in the orchard and sang hymns and Miss Cutler told us stories of Jesus. After the auditorium meetings the delegations met in their halls, had heart-to-heart talks and told of the impressions of the day. During the summer other conferences were held at Silver Bay, the Sunday School, Missionary Education Movement and Y. W. C. A., having chosen this as an ideal place for such a purpose. But the Student Conference exceeded them all in point of numbers."

RUMFORD

The first meeting for the winter season, of the Duxbury Club was held last Friday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. Edith Lee Neal. A short business meeting took place early in the evening, after which a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all. Very appetizing refreshments of rolls and coffee were served at the close of the evening. It was decided by the club that the meetings for the coming year would be held on Wednesday evening instead of Friday evening as formerly. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Hutchins, Roxbury Road, Mexico.

The marriage of Dr. John Adolph Greene and Miss Huldah Elizabeth Pettengill will take place at eight o'clock on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The affair will be very informal, no cards being issued in town.

The Cheney Opera House has changed hands and will from now on be run under entirely new management. The present lessee of the house, Mr. John H. Hasset, has sold out the entire business, including all the scenery, furniture, fixtures and equipment connected therewith, to A. F. Walters of Dixfield. Mr. Walters was formerly in the theatrical business in New York City, and has had considerable experience.

THAT "TIRED FEELING" Is Often Unnatural.

An extra hard day's work may tire you. But if the close of every day finds you worn and weary—your system needs a TONIC.

"L. F." Atwood's Medicine taken daily, drives away that "tired feeling." It has helped New England folks earn the name of being "tireless workers," and Mrs. Brown's letter tells why it has become their favorite tonic. West Farmington, Me.

"As my mother, Mrs. Smith, is writing in praise of your 'L. F.' Atwood's Medicine, I, too, would like to tell you that I think it one of the best household remedies. I consider it one of the best tonics on the market."

(Signed) Mrs. Ida Brown.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Bethel People

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Bethel residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

"My back pained me and the kidney secretions were unnatural," says Jasper C. Cates, of Mill Hill, Bethel. "I know that my kidneys were not right and I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Bosserman's Drug Store. They soon brought me relief and I improved in every way. The statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, still holds good."

ence both in the producing and booking end of the business, having been connected for three years with the Grand Opera House, and subsequently with the Keith Booking Office, Hartwig & Seaman, and Selwyn & Company, the largest play brokers in the country.

An efficient man has been secured to act as resident manager of the house, and this in connection with the fact that the owner is also an experienced theatrical man, assures the future presentation of the best in the line of vaudeville, pictures and dramatic performances.

The Searchlight Club held what was supposedly its regular meeting on Friday afternoon of last week at the home of Mrs. J. A. Nils. A large number of the club were present, and after a short business meeting, it was motioned that the roll call be omitted, and that the club proceed to the regular program of the afternoon.

Mrs. E. Lester Cowan was called upon for the first subject, and with the excuse that she had neglected to bring her paper from the hall, she hurriedly left the room to get it. Upon her return, her arms were filled with various kinds of articles, which as a whole resembled the figure of a woman. This was presented to Miss Pettengill—president of the club—and upon closer examination, the body of this woman proved to be a beautiful mahogany tea tray, a wedding gift from the club to Miss Pettengill, whose marriage to Dr. Greene is so soon to take place. The remaining parts of the figure were composed of all kinds of articles which are in use in all up-to-date kitchens. Miss Pettengill was greatly surprised, but was fully equal to the occasion. After the showering of the gifts, a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all, and delicious refreshments of fruit salad, rolls, coffee, cake, nuts and minis were served.

The Royal Month and the Royal Disease.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its bunches, eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative, consumption.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Interfering with the seemingly patriotic performance of his associates in the Capitol who were patriotically waving the American flag over imaginary United States ships, had not the scheme proved obnoxiously popular.

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE CAN ACCOMPLISH MUCH.

The Washington government has been carrying on a far-reaching and effective press agency propaganda with reference to South American trade.

The exporters and opponents of the Administration have been shouting from the housetops that it is about time to have some sort of real shipping done between American ports and South American countries.

The Panama Canal has been doing business for several weeks, but there has been no rush of orders that would indicate that it would be necessary to dig another ditch across Nicaragua, and with foreign shipping tied up by the European War, it would seem that something really ought to be done to promote our South American trade.

The Washington schemes appear to be largely visionary, and some of the plans suggested are pure "bunk."

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts suggests that six American warships, loaded with samples of American products, be sent to South American ports, and he would also permit representatives of trade organizations of this country, in a limited number, to accompany the ships, so as to explain the advantages of American wares to prospective purchasers.

Now, to avoid misconception, it should be said that Senator Weeks has been a most intelligent and persistent champion of the policy of "getting busy" for Uncle Samuel on the high seas, and, after all, what could afford a more useful diversion for the idling battleships than to go on parade with Yankee wares?

But Secretary Root says no, and he declares that although his department is keenly interested in any legitimate plan to promote our foreign trade, yet when it comes to making an actual investment of capital in Latin America, with the idea of securing early material advantage, that individual and corporate products should be pushed and displayed, not only under the auspices of the federal government, but by commercial and other firms.

WHEN MARK HANNA WAS ALIVE.

When Mark Hanna was alive, he bent every effort to secure ship subsidies, and most of the country was of the opinion that the Ohioan had simply invented a new method by which to loot the Treasury. But years have come and gone since Mark's death, and the floors of the Senate, and Uncle Sam still stands stock still on the pathways of the high seas. Statesmen are beginning to realize that it is necessary that there be some sort of government aid, if private enterprise is to invest its capital in steamships. The German and British governments devised

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ill it has no equal. For ten years the Lydin E. Plinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold."

many plans to make their shipping supreme upon the high seas, and while Uncle Sam looks wistfully out across the waters, he still confines his efforts to press agency work—and this is getting to be somewhat of a "chestnut."

THE "SILENT TOLLERS."

Mr. Walter C. Jenkins has prepared one of the great stories of the year on the domestic silk industry, for the National Magazine, and he very aptly comments in the opening paragraph: "As diamonds are diamonds, so silk is silk."

With the true instinct of a trained writer, Mr. Jenkins starts with the inconspicuous little worm (that as a manufacturer has all captains of industry distanced a mile, while as for mechanics, none in the history of the world have as yet learned to compete with these "silent tollers" who clothe the autons in silk," even extending the field of their usefulness to the history of Fifth Avenue maids, who perform their part in popularizing silk as clothing. Mr. Jenkins' article is shortly to appear in his publication.

MY SYMPHONY.
To live content with small means;
To seek elegance rather than luxury
and refinement rather than fashion;
To be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quickly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds to babes and sage, with open heart; to hear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and uncon-

AUGUST, 1914.
By JOHN MASSEFIELD.
How still this quiet cornfield is tonight;
By an intenser glow the evening falls,
Bringing, not darkness, but a deeper light;
Among the stooks a partridge covey calls.

The windows glitter on the distant hill;
Beyond the hedge the sheep-pen in the fold Stomble on sudden music and are still;
The forlorn pinewoods droop above the world.

And sudden quiet valley reaches out Past the blue hills into the evening sky;
Over the stubble, cawing, goes a rook
Of rooks from harvest, flapping as they fly.
So beautiful it is I never saw
So great a beauty on these English fields
Touched, by the twilight's coming,
into awe,
Ripe to the soul and rich with summer's yields.

These homes, this valley spread below
me here,
The rocks, the tilted stacks, the beasts
in pen,
Have been the heart's desire, past speaking dear
To unknown generations of dead men.

Who, century after century, held these forms,
And, looking out to watch the changing sky,
Heard, as we hear, the rumors and alarms
Of war at hand and danger pressing nigh.

And know, as we know, that the men age meant The breaking-off of ties, the loss of friends,
Death like a miser getting in his rent
And no new stones laid where the track-way ends.

The harvest not yet won, the empty bin,
The friendly horses taken from the walls,
The fellow on the hill not yet brought in,
The cracks unplastered in the leaking
walls;

Yet heard the news, and went discouraged home,
And brooded by the fire with heavy mind,
With such dumb loving of the dark shins loam
As breaks the dumb hearts of the English kind.

Then sadly rose and left the well-loved
Down
And by ship to sea, and knew no more
The fields of home, the byres, the market towns,
Nor the dear outline of the English shore.

But knew the misery of the working wheel,
The freezing in the rigging, the despair
In the revolting second of the wrench
When the blind soul is hung open to the air.

And died (consciously, most) in foreign lands
For some idea not dimly understood
Of an English city never built by hands,
Which love of England prompted and made good.

If there be any life beyond the grave
It must be near the men and things we love,
Some power of quick suggestion how to save Touching the living soul as from above.

An indrawn from the Earth from these dead hearts
So passionate, so deep, so truly blind,
That in the living child the spirit starts.

Feeling companioned still, not left behind.

Surely above these fields a spirit
broods,
A sense of many watchers mottling near,
Of the lone Downland with the forlorn woods
Loved to the death, inestimably dear.

A muttering from beyond the veils of Death
From long dead men, to whom this quiet scene Came among blinding tears with the last breath,
The dying soldier's vision of his queen.

All the unspoken worship of these lives
Spent in forgotten wars at other calls Glimmers upon these fields where evening drives
Beauty like breath so gently darkness falls.

Darkness that makes the meadows holler still,
The elm trees sudden in the hedge, a sigh Moves in the beech-clump on the haunted hill,
The rising planets deepen in the sky,

And silence broods like spirit on the braes;
A glimmering moon begins, the moonlight rare
Over the grasses of the ancient way,
Routed this morning by the passing gale.

THYROID A DANGEROUS WEAPON AGAINST FAT.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has found in the course of a recent investigation into the composition of the so-called obesity cures that a large number of these contain thyroid. Thyroid, in the opinion of the Government scientists, is far too dangerous a weapon for inexperienced persons to experiment with. The thyroid gland itself is one of the mysteries of the human body that the medical profession does not yet fully understand. We know that it is essential to life and that when used as a drug it has a very powerful effect upon the whole human system. This information should be sufficient to warn anyone against dosing himself blindly with the drug.

The thyroid gland is an organ which varies considerably in accordance with the kind of animal in which it occurs.
In man it is situated in the throat in front of and on both sides of the laryng, and consists of two lateral lobes united by a narrow bridge-like central portion. Its presence in the body is apparently necessary to the health of its possessor, but administered in the form of a drug it may have anything but a healthy effect upon its user.

For medical use a number of sheep's thyroids are dried at a temperature of from 90 degrees to 100 degrees F. and then powdered. This powder may be administered either dry or, when treated with glycerin, as a liquid. It indoubtedly does reduce tissue, and therefore those preparations that contain it are special favorites with persons who desire to rid themselves of what they think is superfluous flesh.

Unfortunately it is not possible to remove tissue at will without running great risk of destroying health at the same time. Abnormal deposits of fat are frequently accompanied by disorders of the heart, blood vessels, and kidneys. To remove these deposits abruptly may well produce serious mechanical effects upon the operation of the internal organs. For this reason the medical profession has long recognized that obesity should be considered as a condition worthy of the most skillful treatment and that a cure is never easily and quickly attained. Thyroid preparations, moreover, are particularly objectionable because of the direct effect of the substances composing them. These substances, administered in drug form, may produce symptoms which are commonly associated with certain forms of goiter, namely, rapid and irregular pulse, palpitation of the heart, nervous irritability, dusky skin of the face, difficulty in breathing, paralysis, and even death.

Trained physicians may administer the drug to obtain certain desired effects, but they know that they must use great care in doing so and must be prepared to grapple with serious complications that may arise in consequence of its administration.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls
Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—“I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book ‘Wisdom for Women,’ and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life.”—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N.Y.—“I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it ‘Anemia and Exhaustion,’ and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound brought me out all right.”—Miss LAVISA MYERS, Box 74, Massena, N.Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.
Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham’s Vegetable Compound.

LEPERS OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

A Visit To Detention Colony Near Honolulu

LEPERS HELD FOR MOLOKAI

Receiving Station for the Island for Those Accused

It was by sheer accident that I learned there was a leper colony outside of Honolulu, and through sheer persistence that I found it.

One afternoon I was loitering about the capitol building and reading the queer legal notices posted on the bill boards of the estates of deceased lepers, when I overheard a Hawaiian say to a white man that he could find a witness at the leper hospital and he said he would go out with him on Sunday.

I asked the white man where the place was and he said about six miles outside of the city and he told me how to find it, and he added that all I could see would be through the enclosure as visitors were not permitted.

The next morning I started out, and start was about all I did for an hour or so.

I took the car as directed and had ridden a few blocks when the conductor got to me.

I told him where I wanted to go but he said he did not know of any leper community, and that probably it was on the other side of the city.

I piled off and took a car in the opposite direction, but the conductor was but little more of an information source than the first native, and then he asked me if it was not a hospital I was hunting! He named a hospital, the name being a native word and beginning with K. (I have forgotten the way it was spelled.)

In despair I told him that was my destination. I realized I wasn’t getting anywhere, and thought I would chance the lead.

And he had me hike off again and go back to the place of starting. I told this conductor the name of the hospital—I was careful not to mention leper, for I concluded under another name I would be more likely to find the place.

He carried me two or three miles and transferred me to another line, where I again declared I was hospital hunting.

After a ride out into the country the native conductor told me to get off at a country road and walk about two miles.

The road was shut in on both sides by dense foliage and there was not a breath of air. The tropical sun beat down something fierce, but I pulled my coat and hit the pike. Oh, hot it WAS hot. I walked about half an hour and had about concluded I was wrong again, when ahead I saw the buildings of the place I was hunting.

The hospital grounds and buildings were in a circle, about the circumference of a quarter mile race track, enclosed with a high stockade, with big gates under an arch in front.

From some distance I sat down and sized up the proposition. I had come too far to miss seeing something and learning something. Through the stockade I could see a number of people on one side of the circle, while on the other side not a one was in view. And then I took a chance.

The big gates were open and there was no one near them. I walked in and turned to the right, never risking an eye down the other side where I had seen the people.

I had figured if I could get half way around before I was stopped I could then take my choice of the return, and I would come up the other side—where the lepers were.

I had got about two hundred yards when I heard a call. I did not notice it, but kept marching. Then other calls and a shrill whistle. I stopped and looked across. A native, badly crippled was coming across the circle toward me, waving his arms, and behind him a half dozen other men.

He called to me in English and told me to turn back. I put my hand to my ear as if hard of hearing. He limped along toward me and I walked toward him.

I knew he was a leper and I wanted to get close enough to observe him closely.

He came to within about four rods of me, and we both stopped. He was dressed in white, bareheaded and was very lame. I afterward learned his lameness was not the result of the malady, but an accident.

He asked me who I wanted to see. I replied I was a stranger and just looking around. He told me this was a leper colony and none were allowed within the gates; that it was a rule of the doctors and was solely for safety.

I noted the man carefully. He was about 25 years old, and evidently in the first stages of leprosy. He was bareheaded, and I could see the swelling above his ears, and I noted his hands were partially closed and his fingers appeared stiff.

I did not want to quit so soon, so I asked him where the superintendent was. He pointed out a building near the gate and I went back—a dozen or more lepers, men and women, curiously watching me from about the enclosure, and hurrying to the man I had talked with as soon as I started back.

A big Hawaiian, a man who would weigh 250 pounds came out of the building and curiously asked me what he could do for me, when I told him I was a stranger and wanted to learn something about lepers. He smiled and asked me to come in.

I went into a small office, from which an arch opened into a bed room. He gave me a chair in front of a big roll-top desk. I sat down, when he excused himself, reached in front of me and closed the desk. I wondered why, but he did not explain.

The big fellow spoke fluent English and was very courteous. He told me I could only visit the place under a permit or in charge of a doctor; that he would talk with me a few minutes and then I must go. And then looking at one of my hands he said:

“If you had a dozen permits, Mr. Brown, I would not permit you to visit the grounds today.”

To explain this remark I would state that before leaving my room in the morning I had reached into my grip for a handkerchief, and had run my finger onto the point of a razor that had come open, cutting the flesh to the bone.

To stop the blood I had used cigarette papers. During my walk, swinging my hand, the blood had started again, and the cut was bleeding a very little.

“You are more in danger with that finger,” said the superintendent, “than you would be in sleeping with a smallpox patient. I want to warn you to be exceedingly careful when you leave. Do not touch the finger to anything, tree, seat, shrubbery, or gateway. It is such carelessness that makes lepers.”

And from then on I lost about seven-eighths of any leper curiosity. That bleeding finger seemed to be stiffened. I could not keep my eyes from it.

He asked me outside and pointed to a group of lepers in front of a house a few yards away. There were about a dozen, half women, two of them girls about 15 years. They were well dressed, one wearing a big black straw hat with ashen plumes. They were laughing and singing.

As I watched them a woman came from behind a building nearby, hunched and looked back, as if someone had called her. And she held her hand on the railing—a leper hand.

It had the appearance of scrofula or scrofula. There were scars and white, scale-like formations, and alcohol-like dry sores. The hand only remained a minute, but its picture will remain forever. It was a hand of death. That woman would go to Molokai the next trip, and she would die there. She was branded. There was no help or hope—death was the only release.

One of the women I noted had bandages on her hands. The superintendent said she was trying some Hawaiian remedy for a cure, but it was only a hope, that they all went to Molokai in the end.

He explained to me that the place was a detention hospital, where those having symptoms of the disease were brought and where they were kept for six months before deportation to the leper island. He said some did not have leprosy, only a form of skin disease, and a detention of six months gave the physicians time to pick them out and save them from the island.

The man told me he had been 17 years among the lepers; that for the first six or eight years he was very uneasy, but now fear had absolutely banished. He said if he was positive there was not an abrasion of the skin on his hands he would not fear to hold a leper's hand, and if in good health would not fear to eat or mingle with them. But he said the least break of the skin, no larger than a pinhead, permitted inoculation with contact, and that carelessness in this particular was where leprosy was contracted.

As I sat in the office a little black girl, about six years old, came in with a map, and went into the bedroom. I asked the superintendent if she was a leper. He said she was a leper child and the first symptoms were appearing. This little girl did his room work, mopped the floor, made the bed and took care of the room.

I wondered if some day the man would not have a cut finger and it would come in contact with something the girl had touched. And I felt this would be the result, and that the day would come when instead of taking a colony of lepers to the death island, he would be one of the lepers and would be taken there.

I asked him if he was not afraid of inoculation through the medium of flies or mosquitoes. He laughed and pointed to the bed, double screened. But I thought that these screens would not protect him only at night, and that an able-bodied mosquito might be able to get in a little extra work on his hands or face in the early evening.

There were only 35 lepers in the colony, 150 having been transported to Molokai a few weeks before.

The superintendent held that the disease was not contagious, only infectious, but medical authorities differ on this point. He said it was unquestionably hereditary and he never knew of a child born of leper parents that escaped the malady.

I asked him if he thought leprosy would be finally stamped out in the island and he replied that only through complete isolation of the sexes, sterilization of the men and a rigid search of the islands for all lepers. He said many lepers were living hidden on the several islands, that they lived in the mountains and were protected by their friends and relatives.

He asked if I wanted a drink of water. I thought a minute and decided I was not thirsty. He offered me a cigar from an open box on the table. Again I thought, and I did not smoke. I even forgot to shake hands with him.

After an hour's talk I walked out of the gates into the free world and the sunshine (keeping the cut finger well protected) while the Hawaiian went back through the gates to the lepers. And I wondered how long it would be before he would come out through the gates as a leper, under the care of another superintendent, and be sent to Molokai.

No matter what the place and the risk there is ever a man ready for the job.

A half mile down the road I met and talked with a native, and he showed me where a leper recently committed suicide. He had been condemned to Molokai. He slipped out the gate, ran down the road, hid in the brush and when he heard the searchers coming he sawed his wrist with the ragged edge of an empty tomato can and bled to death.

Before annexation I was told the leper settlement of Molokai was a horror and conditions frightful and that it was used very much as Siberia is by Russia to get rid of undesirable. It is said that in these days many a man unfriendly to the government was simply railroaded to the leper island to be rid of, and that the conditions on the island were awful, that very little care was given by the government and the lepers lived more like wild beasts than humans.

There is a gruesome fascination about Molokai and the lepers. There is not one pleasant sight or thought in connection, yet the harrowing conditions hold you and make you want to see more. You want to talk with them; want to see the life as they see it. You try to comprehend a living, hopeless hell in America.

But one trip is enough. I would never care to see the lepers again.

Some very "nifty" furniture has been installed in the Grand Trunk station at South Paris. Mission settees in dark oak take the place of the old seats along the walls in both waiting rooms. In the men's room a heavy, double settee is placed in the middle of the room, while in the women's room there are a number of individual chairs and rockers. No Persian rug on the floor as yet. A steam heating plant is also being put in to take the place of the hot water heaters.

For the first half of the financial year ending Oct. 1, the British National revenue amounted approximately to $380,000,000, a decrease of $13,500,000 as compared with last year, while the expenditures aggregated $470,000,000, showing an increase of nearly $200,000,000 due to the war.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of J. C. Watson

Rev. C. O. Miller of South Paris, who put in an irrigating plant for his market gardens last spring is satisfied that he has secured large results from it this season. For one thing, he is securing a big yield of handsome potatoes from seed planted the 6th of July, from which he expected to get only some that would do to cook for his chickens. On his pea field, after the early peas were off, he raised sweet corn which brought him $18 for the acre, the corn being planted late in June. "Water did that," says Mr. Miller, and the effects of it were to be noted on all his crops.
